Tucson in 1960

By Ed Dooley

Like 2010, the year 1960, the year of our graduation from Catalina High School, was a Federal Census year. The decennial enumeration found the population of Tucson to stand at 212,892, up from the 1950 Census total of 45,454 inhabitants. This means that during our elementary and secondary school years, Tucson's population grew by over 365 percent! The 1960 count put Tucson among the 75 largest cities in the United States. When you add the city's number to the county's population of 262,139, the total for the area in 1960 stood at 475,031 residents. The skyline of the Old Pueblo was undergoing dramatic change during our four years at Catalina. A new city hall containing the offices of Mayor Don Hummel and City Manager Porter Homer replaced the old one, new high rise buildings were constructed downtown, and older buildings like the Valley National Bank and the Pioneer Hotel had stories added to them.

The main streets for us were Speedway Boulevard, Broadway Street, 22nd Street, and – a distant fourth – Grant Road, all running east and west. We witnessed a dramatic increase in traffic along these arteries. And where people went, commerce and businesses followed. It was along these straight and wide arteries that individual stores and, increasingly, shopping centers were built. One of the first "shopping centers" to be built in Tucson was El Rancho Market, which opened on Speedway in July 1949. This was followed by dozens of other "villages," "-ways," "-gates," "gardens," and "plazas." In our time, we saw the addition of Swanway, Delray, County Fair, Southgate, Casas Adobes, Amphi Plaza, Monterey Village, Campbell Plaza, Flowing Wells, El Con Shopping Center, and other El Ranchos. Many of the businesses that we knew are no longer around, but we remember their names: Johnie's Drive-In, Myerson's, Gruenwald and Adams, Jacome's, Lewis Shoes, Steinfeld's, Porter's of Arizona, Levy's of Tucson, Korby's, Nielsen Drug Co., Sam Levitz Warehouse, Reuben Gold's, Kittles Bike and Key Shop, Ronstadt's Hardware, Midway Lumber Company, Dietz Auto Painting and Repair, O'Reilly Chevrolet, Bill Breck Dodge, Curley Moffet Automobiles, Precision Motors, and Blakley's, to name just a few. Gas could run as low as 15 cents a gallon when there was a "gas war," and a typical new 1960 automobile cost around $3,000.

In our area of town, Speedway was the boundary between Catalina High School and Tucson High School districts. As Tucson experienced the effects of the Baby Boom, new high schools were added in quick succession. In 1958 there were four high schools in the Tucson Unified School District; by 1960, there were eight: Amphitheater, Catalina, Flowing Wells, Pueblo, Rincon, Salpointe, Sunnyside, and Tucson. The athletic competition among them was strong, although there was little other formal contact.

Tucson had two major newspapers in 1960: the Tucson Daily Citizen (the evening paper) and the Tucson Daily Star (morning paper). There were ten radio stations broadcasting at the time: KTAN, KEVT, KCEE, KTKT (the favorite among teenagers), KCUB, KMOP, KTUC, KOLD, KAIR, and KFMM (the only FM station, playing classical music). There were four television stations: KVOA (NBC), KGUN (ABC), KOLD (CBS), and KUAT (the University of Arizona which broadcast “educational I television”).

In 1958, Arizona Highways magazine published a special edition on “Tucson: Sunshine City in the Desert.” Making allowance for his boosterism, the editor was justified in writing: “We met a man not long ago who moved to Tucson with his family last spring. His only regret was that he had not made the move years before. ‘Why do you like Tucson?’ we asked. His answer: ‘Because Tucson is a big modern city with the friendliness and easy informality of a small town.’

Many of us remember the Old Pueblo just that way. And apparently the AARP agrees. In the September/October 2009 issue of its magazine, AARP selected Tucson as its number one choice of “Best Places to Live.”

The following essay was written by our classmate, Wallis Jacobus, just a couple of weeks before we graduated.

For Seniors Only

BY WALLIS JACOBUS

Each one of you, the Class of '60, has spent the past four years growing up. They have been four, sometimes long and sometimes short years, which are only memories now. Years full of happiness, sadness, pain, and achievement which some day you will look back upon with laughter.

Each one of you can probably remember that first day of school. You flocked to Tucson High (our rival-to-be) to attend classes that first day. The "plant" hadn't been completed yet so THS was just our temporary quarters. That was the first day, with the halls a maze trying to trap us. But you finally got through it all in one piece but perhaps very red faced.

Class elections soon rolled around and Neal ("I won't be a rubber stamp") Genda elected president and assisted by Diane Jeffries and Judy Allen.

The first semester went by and soon it was time for us to move into our own building. We were now bona fide members of Catalina High School. Our school was fresh and new and so was our spirit. Every Friday afternoon "See you at the game tonight" rang through the halls. Catalina, our Catalina had real meaning, it was our Catalina. Baseball took the field and soon summer rolled around.

High On Ladder

Early next September we returned to school, another rung higher on the ladder of high school. Another class took our place as freshmen and we could finally say rather disdainfully, "You can always tell a freshman," in that knowing tone that only sophomores, juniors, and seniors seem to acquire. Many of us started thinking about that long awaited day, our 16th birthday and our driver's license.

For boys it meant cruising Johnie's and for girls visiting girl friends. Our basketball team went on to win the city championship backed by many eager Trojans. Parties were held almost every week-end or maybe we traveled to Sabino Canyon. Another summer finally arrived and we had three more months of freedom.

We returned to school the following year with the know-it-all attitude typical of upperclassmen. Several of our boys were on there way to becoming top athletes. We weren't quite as close as we used to be but we still had fun when we all worked together as we did on the Junior Prom. Its program takes a prominent spot on many senior girls bulletin boards.

By the beginning of this year, the all important one, we started noticing many new faces and missing a few favorite ones.

And Finally, Senior Year

We had our Senior Prom and many parties, but all in all, it was still a success. One of our most successful events was Senior Week. The fashion show and lunch together were enjoyed by everyone. And there were many laughs over "how to marry a millionaire."

"Oh, yes," said the lower classmen, "we'll remember the Class of '60."

Next Friday night as we put on our caps and gowns let's think back over the past four years with a smile, for they will never be ours again.
